Since 1952, when it was still called Camp Cooke, Allan Hancock College has been offering classes at Vandenberg Air Force Base. The center, which is open to the general public, consists of 12 classrooms, a computer lab and an administrative office. There is also a dedicated area set aside for the bookstore. The Allan Hancock College VAFB Center is part of the base education center shared with the U.S. Air Force Education Office and two private four-year universities.
